How a stop works

A team scans the QR code in the room they are standing in. It opens that room's page. At the very first stop they type their 16-character team code once; their phone remembers it after that. Their next clue appears on screen and the tracker records the stop.

Every room has a different, secret address

The web address behind each QR code contains a random tag that appears nowhere else - not in the page source, not on any other poster. A team cannot reach a room's clue without physically scanning that room's code, and clues are released strictly in route order, so no team can skip ahead. Do not post the full list of addresses anywhere players can see it.

Placement

Pages 2-15 are the room posters, one per page, in the order listed below. Put each one inside its room at eye level, clear of doors, glass edges, signage and equipment.

The Canteen does double duty

Teams scan it at the start for clue 1, and again once their route is complete.

The treasure poster is the finish line

Page 16 is the winning code. Attach it to the prize itself, hidden in the room the final clue names. The first team to scan it and enter their code wins, and every other code in the building stops working straight away.

Start and stop from the tracker

Codes show a "not started" message until an organizer presses Start, and a paused message after Stop. Rename the teams there too, then print their slips.

Team code slips

The last two pages hold one slip per team. Cut them apart and give each team only its own slip - a borrowed code shows another team's route, not a shortcut.
